Postcard from Akwa

Dear Lucy,

I hope all is well on Earth these days!
I just wanted to let you know about my space adventure! We set off in search of the first fragment and met some Akwans. Akwans are an alien race that can breathe in and out of water. They have webbed hands and feet, blue eyes, and spotted skin. Even though they were a little wary of us at first, they were quite friendly once we got to know them.
I think you would've really liked the Akwans!
Anyway, I think we're really close to finding our first fragment. I'll write again soon.

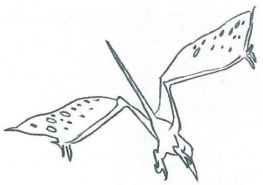

With Love,
Ant

To. Lucy

Ant's diary

The Krools won't give up! Tiger, Seven and I had just left the spaceship graveyard when they started chasing us again. We ran down the hillside …

and climbed up a tree. However, the Krools saw us and we had to shrink to leap into a crack in the ground. Just when we thought we were safe, the Krools started to dig the earth to get to us.
We went deeper underground and fell in sticky, sludgy goo. Then, three Red Gubloons ran towards us. It turns out a Meeb was in the tunnel blocking the way. Luckily, a Krool fell on top of the Meeb and they got into a fight. We certainly had a chaotic adventure on Kree-Marr.

p19

Reading journal

The story is about the micro-friends meeting Kree-Ator and trying to get rid of the Meebs to save Planet Kree-Marr.
The micro-friends are also looking for the fragment that is on Planet Kree-Marr.

The scariest part of the story is when the Meebs were not scared of the thorns and were closing in on the micro-friends.

My favourite part of the story is when the micro-friends meet Kree-Ator because Kree-Ator tells the Red Gubloons to let the children go.

I would give the story 10 stars our of ten(ten being the best)!
